PREW & CAMPBELL

THURSDAY, JAN. 10, 1878

A MEETING was called at Washington Pa., last night in the interest of the pro-posed narrow gauge road to Wellsburg there is little or no feeling in regard to this road at Wellsburg, owing to the yet undeveloped future of that place as identified with the Pittsburgh, Wheeling & barley, and oats is considerably behind Kentucky road. Neither do we learn that any special feeling has been aroused line of the proposed road through Brooke county. does not go very much on railroads at best, and for the present the people seem satisfied with the one they have got.

The State Commissioner reports that out of fifty-even companies doing business in the State but thirteen paid any dividends, and of these but four paid on both common and preferred stock, and three of these last were leased lines, which probably hardly earned their expenses. The Same Complaint Everywhere About the Schools.

The total receipts for public school purposes in New York last year were $12,110,000, and the total expenditures for taschers' salaries were $7,915,000; the amount paid for school houses and repairs $1,558,000. The number of school houses is 11,833, and their estimated value $30,380,000. Gov. Robinson states that "the money raised by taxalion for the schools of the State amounts to much more than double the same required to pay the entire expenses of the State government, executive, legislative, judicial, civil and military." He thinks there is a wrong in "applying large amounts of the money raised to the support of high schools and instruction in all the sciences and higher branches of study required in the learned professions." He cannot give his approval to this practice. The only good reason that can be given for taxing one class of citizens for the education of the children of another is the necessity of giving to the children of all classes a sufficient common school education to the children of another is the necessity of giving to the children of all classes a sufficient common school education to the children of another is the necessity of giving to the children of all classes as a strengthen all partitions and slight many partitions and slight man casion of the children of another is the necessity of giving to the children of all classes a sufficient common school education to enable them to understand their duties and exercise their rights as editiens of a free country governed by the popular voice. When we go beyond this, says he, "and take from one man the money necessary to educate the children of another man in the arts and sciences, we perpetrate an act of injustice under the forms of law; and what is worse, instead of educating the masses of children so as to prepare them for the pursuits and industries upon which they must depend for a living, we educate them in such a way as to make them discontented with their condition, and unfit to discharge its duties."

Crops of 1877 Throughout the

Mew YorkSan.

This country is the greatest of grain merchants, and it is well, with the opening of the new year, to take an account of stock. Let us sum up the results of the harvests of 1877 both in our own-land and in European States.

As regards France, the grain crop of the year shows an average return in point of quantity, but a decline is remarked in weight and quality as compared with the yield of 1876. In the case of wheat, for instance, the deficiency is reckoned at from five to seven per cent, and there is no doubt that France will be obliged to supplement her native resources, to some extent, by importations of this staple.

the average. The results are similar Scotland and Ireland, and a forth source of loss to the latter country is the Scotland and Ireland, and a forther source of loss to the latter country is the fact that potatoes suffered greatly, owing to the prevailing humidity of the atmosphere. As regards Italy, very different returns are offered by different localities. Throughout the Southern provinces, formerly comprised in the kingdom of Naples, the crops seem to have been exclent in respect of quality, although the quantity fell somewhat short of the expectations of the spring. In Tuccany and the country of Ancona, and throughout the old States of the Church, the amount of grain harveated is thirty per omit below the yield of agerage yerrs. With one or two exceptions the reports from the countries which make up the German Empire are decidedly unfavorable. In the Rhine province wheat exhibits a gain of ten per cent over the normal quantity, but elsewhere in Prussia every species of grain shows a decline of from six to seventeen per cent. We find nearly equivalent results in Baden and Wurtemberg, but in Saxony the crop owheat is equal to the average, and in parts of Bavaria it rose some seventeen per cent above the normal level. In the latter country, moreover, the volume of barley harvested is at least a quarter larger than the usual return. In the German provinces of Austria the amount of wheat is between two and three milion quintals in excess of the products of ordinary years.

In Hungary the amount of wheat ordinary years.
In Hungary the amount of when ordinary years.

In Hungary the amount of wheat garnered is extremely satisfactory. As a rule this country is able to export from three to four million quintals, but the products of 1877 will more than double that surplus. We may add that, in other respects, the past year has been a profitable one to the Hungarian agriculturist, nearly all sorts of grain giving returns if ar above the average. We come now to Russia, the great rival of the United States, as a purveyor of grain, and here we find a marked variance of results according to localities. In the plains of the Vistula, and generally within the limits of Russian Poland, the yield of wheat shows a decline of from ten to fifteen per seen the low ordinary years. Throughout central and southern Russia, on the other hand, the wheat crop is excellent, and presents over the returns of 1876 an excess of twenty-five per cent. A marked falling off, however, is observed in the yield of barley and oats.

Such is the record of 1877 for most of the grain-producing countries of Lurope. In the United States the harvests of the year are on the whole eminently satisfactory. Thus our yield of wheat, which in 1876 was 265,000,000, bushels, rose last season to 325,000,000, bushels, rose last se demand for our productions will exhibit a large increase during the next five or six months, and that the existing situa-tion is peculiarly favorable to ation is peculiarly favorable to the American agriculturist.
